CATCH UP WITH KYLA

Hello Friends and Family!

How is everyone doing? I miss being at home and getting to see everyone all the time. But I am super happy with what I am doing here in Colorado. It has been a lot of fun getting to know the other staff and learning about this sustainable way to grow food.

This month is an exciting one, we have our DTS school starting, so we have 4 students that are here for the next three months learning all about God and more of what he has for them.

We also have an OASYS training course going for 6 weeks, OASYS stands for open-source aquaponic system. This is our smaller system that we get to take and build all over the world in other places, making it an amazing tool for evangelism. I am getting to participate in this course to learn more in-depth how to build, manage and maintain our system to keep it working. During the course, we will be building a whole new system, getting it up and running to then be able to experiment with what it takes to grow other produce like tomatoes, peppers, herbs, and maybe even potatoes. We want to be able to produce enough food for people who are using these systems to get as much nutrients and variety as they can for a proper healthy diet.

It's pretty amazing the way God works, I never thought I would find myself in a place like this. I always envisioned myself working my way up in a kitchen and making extravagant food at a restaurant, and becoming the best chef I could be. But I know that is not where God wants me. Doesn't mean I know what God is calling me for, but I know it's bigger than I could ever imagine. I know I am supposed to feed the hungry, what I didn't realize was how I was going to be doing that. God has plans for us and they may not look like what we thought and maybe it's hard to deviate from our own plans because we want to hold on to our own will.

But God has something way more amazing for us and can give us more than what we imagined. There's no place I would rather be right now than leaning in to God's purpose and learning how to feed and self-sustain people around the world who need this system and what we are doing.

BALLOONS AND MOUNTAINS

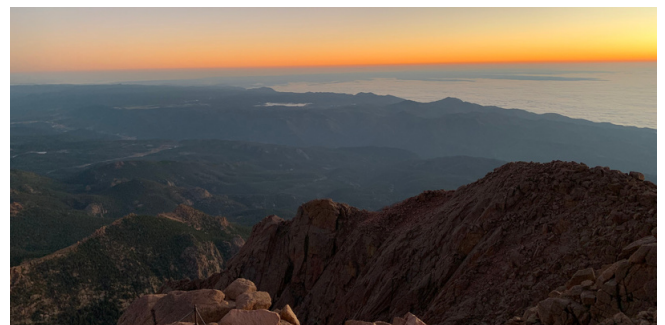

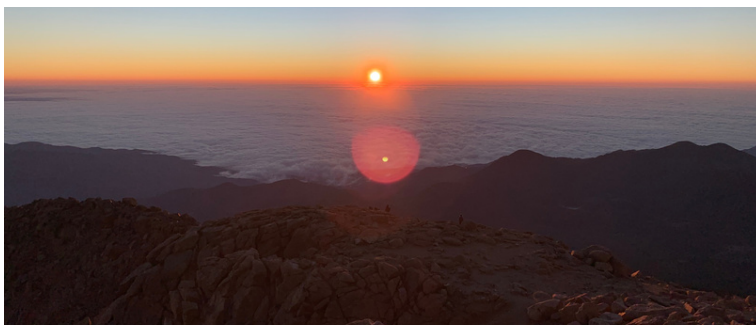

A fun thing I got to do this month was going to the balloon festival with friends. We saw them lift off in the morning, and at night, they would be blasting the fire and making the park glow with all the wonderful colors of the balloons.

It was super unique all the different ones they had, and seeing all the people and families gathered around to come and enjoy was very joyful.

I also got to go to the top of Pikes Peak, which is about 14,000 feet in elevation, and watch the sunrise. It was so beautiful how God painted the sky with all of these different colors. It really makes you grateful to see the vast and beautiful world in the new light coming from the darkness. I really enjoyed seeing the sunrise on a new day and being able to thank God as he created it in front of me.

I just want to thank all of you for being on this journey with me and supporting me in prayer and financially. I would not be able to be here without you living out a dream I didn't know was real until now.

YOU CAN HELP!

Now here is the participation part of my newsletter. We need prayer and lots of it. We are growing plants and Christians here in Colorado, and we run on prayer. Also, we need a new delivery van here at the base, so we trust God to meet that need.

If you feel God leading I would love your support for this mission. Just click the link allowing you to give to the base for a tax-free donation.

Lastly, if you would do me a huge blessing and share this newsletter with a few of your fellow Christians I would love that so much.

May God bless you and keep you in all you do
